Six letters (numbered 5 to 10 below).

Introduction

The six Spanish nineteenth-century letters edited and translated below are held in the University Archives and Special Collections at California State University, Fullerton (CSUF), where they are part of the Local History Collection (Early California Letters, Rancho San Antonio/Peralta Letters). Four letters from the same collection were edited and translated in The Welebaethan: A Journal of History 46 (2019): 341–49, online, which is why the letters presented here are numbered 5 to 10. All correspondences are written on paper in black ink, they range from one to two pages in length, and their individual formats and other external characteristics are described in the edition below. They are overall in fair condition with some discoloration and stains, as well as minor tears and some fraying.

Letters 5, 6, 7, 8, and 10 are authored by Antonio Maria Peralta (1809–1879) of Rancho San Antonio, an 1820 land-grant property in today's Alameda County, California; letter 9 is authored by Peralta's second wife, María Dolores Archuleta de Peralta (1828–1868). The correspondences' addressee is Don Diego A. Forbes—which is how the British diplomat James Alexander Forbes (1804–1881) was known by the locals in Mexican and U.S. California; see Russell M. Posner, "A British Consular Agent in California: The Reports of James A. Forbes, 1843–1846," Southern California Quarterly 53, no. 2 (1971): 101–12, online. As Forbes was married to Marta Ana María Galindo (1815–1884), and Peralta—in his first marriage—had been married to María Antonia Galindo (1809–1850), the two were not just business associates but, by virtue of their Galindo marriages, also distant relatives.

The letters shed light on Peralta's sons running into trouble with a bill of sale (letter 5); they mention various property sales and land transactions (letters 5 and 10); they document the delivery of his sister's cattle (letter 6); they indicate his second wife's need for loans (letter 9); and they, above all, highlight the family's ongoing issues with his late father's will (letters 6, 7, and 8). Thus, these correspondences detail the life of landholding Californians of Mexican descent in the mid-nineteenth century, including health concerns, familial conflicts, and interpersonal exchanges. Throughout the letters, it is clear that the Peraltas trust Forbes's legal judgment and financial acumen. These documents should be of particular interest to scholars of U.S. history, California genealogy and geography, nineteenth-century economics, sociology and anthropology, as well as historical linguistics.

The Spanish editions presented here preserve the original spelling, punctuation, and epistolary paragraph structure. The following symbols are used: [/] to indicate words/letters that would be separated in modern Spanish, and [-] to indicate words/letters that would be connected in modern Spanish. Modern accents over vowels have been added; however, letter 9 also features some original accents. All editorial additions appear in square brackets. The English translations offered below attempt to reflect the style of nineteenth-century California Spanish and therefore stay as close to the wording and syntax of the original letters as possible. Identifiable individuals, locations, and technical terms have been referenced in the footnotes of the translations, usually when they first appear.

Mister Don¹ Diego A. Forbes²

[Rancho] San Antonio,³ November 5, 1854⁴

My friend and my lord, finding myself in need of some additional means to finish concluding my business, I hope you will send to me hereafter—by way of my son Guadalupe⁵—the following number [deletion]. My children⁶ had a misunderstanding with a gentleman about

² Diego A. Forbes (Forbez), a.k.a. James Alexander Forbes (1804–1881), a British diplomat in Mexican and U.S. California. In 1834, Forbes married Marta Ana Maria Galindo (1815–1884).

³ Land grant rancho in Alameda County, California, located at 2465 34th Avenue, Oakland, California 94601. The current structure was not built until 1870.

⁴ Sunday, November 5, 1854.

⁵ José Guadalupe de Gracia Peralta (1832–1892).

⁶ Antonio Maria Peralta (1801–1879) had 14 children: 11 from his first marriage (1828) to María Antonia Galindo (1809–1850) and 3 from his second marriage (1852) to María Dolores Archuleta (1828–1868). Fewer than half of these 14 children reached adulthood. The incident described above presumably refers to several of his older sons from his first marriage.

something they had agreed to pay him, and since they were unable to sell any seeds, they had everything embargoed.⁷ So, it was necessary for me to come to their defense with the bill of sale, which they made for me—the one that you had made for them in San Francisco.

⁸ And since that one lacked witnesses, they annulled it for me. All this resulted in me being their guarantor, and at that moment the embargo was lifted, and it was to be auctioned off on Tuesday.⁹

Two days ago,¹⁰ the German came here, the one who bought the mountain range. He asked me about you, and I told him that you might be in San Francisco. And he told me that he was going to pay and that I should give him the title deed.

Finally, my friend, after I collect everything as I have told you, pay yourself everything that I owe you and for everything you have done for me, and whatever remains, you know where to secure it so that it gives us some return, and whatever it is, let me know, so I can make my will because, my friend, we are mortal.

And not offering anything else, be commended to your friend, who appreciates you [and] who kisses your hand,
 Antonio Maria Peralta¹¹

List of persons who assisted with the delivery of cattle to my sister Joséfa Peralta,¹⁴ who are the following:

Rafael Galindo¹⁵

José Galindo,¹⁶ who then broke his leg

Crisanto Peralta,¹⁷ my son

Fernando Peralta¹⁸

Guadalupe Peralta

Antonio Peralta,¹⁹ son

Miguel Peralta²⁰

All these people who I mentioned are in the town²¹ and Mateo Juares²² and others who are absent.

My dear compadre,²³

the one [i.e., the letter] I sent with José Galindo was very rushed—Who knows whether you understood it?—and that is why I sent my son Antonio, leaving me alone at home and half sick and having to give testimony on Monday²⁴ in Clinton,²⁵ as I did in San Francisco. I went three times to give it in court, and that is why I have not been able to go.

Pertaining to what you said in your previous [letter] with regard to the Chileans, I say [this]: once we went, myself and Ygnacio,²⁶ to see my father,²⁷ and my father showed us the will he had made. We saw it and told him that it was not good, that it was not well written, and that it was missing witnesses. And so, my father [next page] told us to take it and search for someone who knew how to do it and [illegible] to sign it. At that time it was getting late, [and he, presumably Ygnacio] was here at my house, and he offered to bring a person who knew [how to do it], reassuring [me]. And he made a document, which we took to my father. He saw it, and he did not like it because [illegible] that he had not put [in], my father said. For the same [reason], I have never owed, nor do I owe anyone, so that they did not have to pay.

¹⁴ Maria Joséfa Peralta (1793–1862), also known as “Chepa” or “Chepita.”

¹⁵ Rafael Antonio Galindo (1831–?).

¹⁶ Presumably José Victor Galindo (1835–?) or José Domingo de la Resurección Galindo (1837–1877).

¹⁷ Crisanto Antonio Peralta (1838–1896).

¹⁸ Lorenzo Fernando Antonio Peralta (1833–1891).

¹⁹ Antonio María Severo Peralta (1829–1879).

²⁰ Presumably Miguel Antonio Peralta (1824–1869).

²¹ Presumably the Pueblo de San José in Santa Clara County, California, founded in 1777.

²² Presumably Mateo Juares (1813–1901).

²³ Compadre: Spanish title for a close (male) friend, in this case Forbes, or a godfather in the Catholic Church.

²⁴ Since this letter is only tentatively datable to “[April 1855],” the exact Monday is unclear.

²⁵ 1850s mining community in Amador County, California.

²⁶ Hermenegildo Ignacio (Ygnacio) Peralta (1791–1874), Antonio María Peralta’s older brother.

²⁷ Luis María Peralta (1759–1851), the first grantee of Rancho San Antonio.

He ripped it up, and the old one [i.e., the old will] remained—the one that had served as a draft.

Compadre, I have yearned to go there, but I have not been able to [do so]. If the matter is left for Tuesday,²⁸ there will be room to gather the witnesses. The one I call Chepa²⁹ has received the cattle to take care of them. The last one to have Chepa's cattle [i.e., before the delivery recorded earlier in this letter]—who is, I think, the most opposed—is Nicolas Berrellesa, Senior.³⁰ Compadre, forgive me for all the mistakes found in the letters that I have [deletion] written to you and [for the] nonsense.

The cattle of Guadalupe I already received from [him], and then he received the cattle from Ramón,³¹ the son of Guillermo Castro,³² [who] thinks it will be in his possession. If the court waits until Tuesday, there will be time to take the people who had Chepa's cattle. Compadre, have patience.

Your very affectionate compadre, who wishes to see you,

Antonio Maria Peralta

I am taking advantage of the occasion that Domingo³⁴ is coming to see you, to tell you that I forgot to mention to you, that Nicolas Berrellesa, Senior, can additionally serve as witness. He also visited my father: a few months ago, Nicolas and Bernarda³⁵ came here and solicited him to revoke the will, saying that my father was out of his senses, and as he declined to do so, he notified Ygnacio and myself.

My appreciated comadre,

If it is necessary for the four of us³⁸ to present ourselves to reclaim the old will, which was used as a draft for the new one, so that by it the cause can be acted upon, then—since they state that the new one is nullified, that it was signed without knowledge what my father had signed, and that you and Father Nobili³⁹ did what seemed right to you—I think it would be good to make a claim of the old one [i.e., the old will] that was delivered, who received it on my behalf, and whether it is not possible to tell them that, if it is not delivered, there will be a judgment against them without any inquiry. In the end, you know what you are doing, but—if it is convenient—do let us know something about it.

Give my greetings to my comadre, and you, be commended, as you wish, to your very affectionate comadre, [who] kisses your hand,

Esteemed compadre,

I⁴¹ will be glad if, upon receiving this [letter], you are as usual in the company of the rest of the family

Compadre, you cannot imagine the shame that I felt at this moment when I had to write you these four poorly addressed letters. And at the same time, I beg you to do me the favor of lending me fifty pesos in silver and to give them to my relative Fernando⁴² who, the first time [i.e., the next time] you come to the Ranch, will return [i.e., repay] everything together, namely, the two hundred pesos you lent me the last time. And I hope you will not fail to assist me with this money that I beg you to lend me, so that the same bearer can deliver it to the town. [next page]

Please do me the favor of giving my greetings to my comadre and the rest of the family, and you, receive them on my behalf. Your very affectionate servant, who kisses your hand,

Translation No. 10: Antonio Maria Peralta to Diego A. Forbes, [no location], [undated].

Mister Don Diego Forbes

My appreciable comadre,

Don Aniceto Buelna⁴³ has no other purpose than to bring you a deed of sale for a piece of land that I have sold by the little creek of Liar⁴⁴ for the sum of four thousand one hundred eighty-seven pesos cuatro reales,⁴⁵ for which I will have you sign and, at the same time, certify your signature before a notary, so that a record of this sale may be made in this county.

I will not elaborate any further because Mister Buelna will tell you about this matter, as he was engaged in other business with Toñita⁴⁶ that also touches upon this point.

Your very affectionate comadre, who appreciates you,
 Antonio Maria Peralta
 [paraph]

⁴³ Unidentified.

⁴⁴ Unidentified.

⁴⁵ Presumably the Spanish "4 reales" silver coin still circulating in California at this time.

⁴⁶ At least four of Antonio Maria Peralta's daughters had the name "Antonia" ("Toñita") among their first names, but the only one old enough to be engaged in business dealings at this time would have been María Rosa Antonia Peralta Mendizabal (1836–1911). "Toñita" may be referring to her.
